Certificate course (Green Skill Development Programme)

on

Monitoring of Environmental Parameters and Their Interpretation

26th February to 14th March, 2019 (Course duration: 120 hrs)

Applications are invited for the certificate course funded under “Green Skill Development Programme” (GSDP) with following details:

Title of the Course: Monitoring of Environmental Factors and Interpretation

Background: Environmental processes in nature are controlled through interactions of various components such as air, water, soil, and other natural resources. A good understanding of these components separately as well as in integrated way, along with their natural cycles and actual processes involved, can be helpful for all the stakeholders of the society. It is easier way to understand the processes occurring in the nature, if it can be depicted on map through remote sensing and GIS methods. This can directly help the policymakers to identify the issue of particular area. So, description of these components in an integrated way is idea of this concept. This program will train the stakeholders or participants, so that they can use this knowledge to enhance their carrier. Therefore, candidates trained in analysing different environmental factors are expected to be ‘Green Practitioners’ and ambassadors of Green Skill Development Programme (GSDP) of MoEFCC, GoI.

Course duration: 26th February to 14th March, 2019 (120 hrs)
